In late December 1954, a meeting was held in the office of the Political Administration of the GDR Ministry of Traffic. At this conference, the possibility of a renewed blockade of West Berlin was hinted. It was stated that in view of the seriousness of the situation created by the organization of a West German army, the blockade would have to be much more rigid than the previous one. It was intended to disrupt supply lines leading to West Berlin in order to close the boundaries between West and East Germany, and to prohibit flying to West Berlin. In the event of a blockade the population of West Berlin will be supplied by East Berlin.
